What's new in Demigods:

Hercules Following a Classroom Gang run around, I decided to go to The School of Visual Arts To play with light and shadows, shapes, and textures. The Art School is located in Manhattan, which not only has skyscrapers, but also a rich, diverse mix of cultures, and this particular run was around the Tribeca area. As you can see, the buildings are really big around here! Quite a contrast to my hometown of South Jersey, and one of my favorite parts of this area of NY is that people dress worldly, even on a casual look! Anyway, it was a really great school, and I feel like I still have a lot to learn. There's another part to this place that I haven't mentioned, but in case you are interested: great offers in the Photography Department. Hercules Being a K-12 educator requires you to read, write, and share Your classroom designs are much more versatile and innovate than ever. Along with that, educators who cater their experiences to the learning style of their students need to know too. No two students learn at the same pace, nor do they take instruction at the same pace. Paradigmshift helps you be more flexible in how you share and feedback and by extension make a positive difference in your students' lives. You can see how it changes academic pedagogy and personal learning styles allowing you to adapt to your students' unique characteristics. And, I love the affiliate program. Specializing Teacher Are you frustrated by the edtech industry's complexity and so you are not able to help direct your students' learning with evidence-based approaches? Or, are you dissatisfied with your classroom experience? If so, the Specializing Teacher program will show you how to revitalize and simplify your classroom so students will work at their own pace, use flashcards and other learning tools effectively, and a holistic approach to teaching and learning—just what they need. Traditional education can be counterintuitive and an uphill battle when teaching to the masses. Traditional education requires a large time investment, which many students cannot afford. Ineffective teaching methods and strained relationships with students often contribute to an unproductive learning
